Children in the Middle

A SAMSHA Model Program whose time has come!

Fifty-seven percent of children in the classroom have divorcing parents and their hearts are hurting. When children's hearts are hurting, they do not easily learn, creating current and future emotional and behavioral problems. Children caught in the middle of their parents conflicts may be experiencing any of the following signs:

- Loss of concentration and attention
- Declining grades and behavior problems
- Withdrawal from friends and children and anxiety
- Emotional outbursts and health problems
- Serious anger with one or both parents
- Delinquency and substance abuse

Children don't easily talk about their parents' divorce. What can parents do to protect their children and help themselves as well during this difficult time? Come and learn how to help these children come to terms with their parents' divorce. Early identification and intervention of the root of these problems is essential as they can linger for years if not dealt with as they occur. This workshop will give parents ways to reconnect with their children and help alleviate many of the problems that divorcing parents get caught up in, and in so doing, strengthen their relationship with their children. The training is not a lecture format but is highly interactive, teaches concepts in small groups, allows for discussion of issues and gives parents five concrete ways that can help children of divorce. These concepts are presented in a way that parents will always remember.
